THE MAN WITH THE MOVIE CAMERA 1929 ("a visual symphony" DV)
by Dziga Vertov

" through his documentaries Dziga Vertov exerted a seminal influence far beyond the limits of Soviet cinema. hating the false reality of feature films, he revolutionized the news-reel and created a uniquely personal form which blended facts, feelings, & propaganda into a kind of political surrealism." FILM COMMENT SPRING 72

Ostensibly a documentary of Soviet life covering the working day, birth, marriage, death, it is as modern as anything produced today

" the man with the camera must give up his usual fixed position. he must exert his powers of observation and his agility to the maximum in order to keep up with the speed of life." DV

from the Vertov Papers, a book-length translation of Vertov's writings by Marco Carynnyk

THE SEASHELL AND THE CLERGYMAN
by Germaine Dulac

One of the classic examples of the movement, produced in 1928. While bearing many similarities to LE CHIEN ANDALOU, this film marks the transition from dada surrealism to Freudian surrealism, as it takes us into the mind of a clergyman to explore thru his conscious vs. subconscious thoughts, his conflicts between his normal impulses and the religious vows which stifle him.

FOG PUMAS by Gunvor Nelson

Strange places in the filmmakers' minds mixed with strange places in reality make a third place on film. The continuity is built on subjective emotional logic.

IN THE SLIPSTREAM by Phillip Hacker

" I have slowed down life at an airport, looked at airplanes as living creatures in an organic sea of dreams and as ghosts in surreal worlds." PH
